Stud-Horse Poker. The item on stud-horse poker that appeared in yesterday's Record-Union, caused a considerable commotion in the gaming circles last evening, and the games were not so well patronized as usual. Several gentlemen who employ a great many clerks met yesterday, accidentally of course, and they agreed to employ the service of a detective, whose business it will be to visit the games, locate them, get the names of the proprietors, and so far as possible those who frequent or play at them. The result will be this: Many young men who now move in social circles, have good clerical positions, handle the cash of their employers daily will be called to the "Captain's office" and paid off, with no other explanation except, "your services are no longer required." This they deem necessary, not only for their own protection, but the salvation of the young men of this city, who are nightly inveigled into those places of iniquity, where the first step places them squarely on the road to sin and degradation. A gentleman who says he has looked in upon several of those games, played, not in saloons, but rooms in the rear of cigar stands, has seen what are considered the best and most promising young men of the city lose all their money, then pledge their not redeemed immediately he will inform their employer. This means ruin to the clerk, and he makes any kind of a sacrifice, submits himself to a second robbery, in order to save, not alone his reputation but that of his family, for a discharge un der those circumstances means degradation and ruin. A young man called at the police station yesterday and stated that he had lost $19 at a stud-horse game, told where it was located, named the proprietors, and asked their arrest. The police informed him they could not assist him in the least. How different in San Francisco. On the same information Chief Crowley, of the metropolis, would have arrested the guilty parties immediately, the boy's hard-earned coin would have been returned to him and the culprits placed behind the bars. In a city that licenses gambling, like Sacramento-a disgrace which no other municipality ever allowed to be published to the world—it is the duty of the press

Dr. Newman's Lecture To-night.

We do not have in this city such literary and scholarly advantages as the lecture field of the populous East affords that peo ple. We have but occasional opportunities of the character afforded to night, and it is not creditable to us that this is so, since we for our lecture-room rostrums. Happily the presence of Rev. J. P. Newman, D. D. LL. D., in this city, where he has made a voluntary pause in a Western tour, for rest, has been seized upon to secure the delivery by this distinguished gentleman of a lect ure. He has consented to entertain the public this evening by an account of his man of practical and comprehensive views, a scholar of high accomplishment and a traveler of most extended and varied experience. His naturally broad powers of observation have been keenly cultivated, and his clearness of judgment insight into character, philosophical cast of mind, his love for the beautiful, his brilliance of imagery, and his store of classical knowledge and modern information, make his narratives of foreign lands not only earand thoroughly entertaining. A thoughtful contemporary in another State, speaking of the lecture he is to deliver to-night

The Rev. Dr. Newman, General Grant's pasto wonders of buried cities, their remains of art, their sculptural creations, their ruined palaces, their engineering triumphs, and the tombs of bronze and marble. His lecture throughout abounded in classical beauties. The Bible, Xenophon, Herodotus and other authorities were drawn upon freely for illustrations. It was a lecture that carried eaptive the imagination and the senses of those who listened to the most scholarly discourse ever delivered in this city. It is expected that appreciation of scholarship and ability will be manifest to-night crowded auditorium. The lecture will begin at a quarter to 8 o'clock precisely, and it is desirable that there should be r late coming. The price of admission ha been fixed by the express stipulation of Newman at a figure within the reach of
